Rose realizes she's wasted twenty-four years of living and makes a list on the back of a Wal-Mart receipt: twenty-eight things she wants to accomplish before her vision comes true. She's well on her way with the help of her next door neighbor Joe, who has no trouble teaching Rose the rules of drinking, but won't help with number fifteen-- do more with a man. Joe's new to town, but it doesn't take a vision for Rose to realize he's got plenty secrets of his own. Somebody thinks Rose has something they want and they'll do anything to get it. Her house is Known for her hilariously acerbic observations on her blog, People I Want to Punch in the Throat, Mann now brings her sharp wit to bear on suburban life, marriage, and motherhood in this laugh-out-loud collection of essays. A grumpy man. A recovering people-pleaser. And the secret club that brings them together. Lee Buchanan is a hot mess. Turning one's father in to the feds can do that to a man. He had nothing to do with his father's Ponzi scheme, but he's blacklisted from commercial real estate all the same. Which is how he ends up in Asheville, working at the brewery he inherited with his siblings.

He's salty as hell, and he doesn't care who knows it. Until the gorgeous, intriguing Blue Combs issues the most peculiar invitation he's ever received: Come to the Bad Luck Club. We can help you. It sounds like a cult or, worse, a group of Mary Sues, but Blue is different from any woman he's ever met. For better or worse, he's drawn to her. Just like she's drawn to him, even if she has no intention of going all in with another man. She's been there, done that, twice, and the life she's built for herself is too important to risk. What starts as one person's desire to help another turns into a connection too powerful to be denied—but can two broken people grow together, or will they tear each other apart?
