The trolley problem is a thought experiment in ethics. It is generally considered to represent a classic clash between two schools of moral thought, utilitarianism and deontological ethics. The general form of the problem is this: There is a runaway trolley barreling down the railway tracks. Ahead, on the tracks, there are five people tied up and unable to move. Trolley problem - Wikipedia

The most notable case in this area is Pickford v Quirke where a taxpayer purchased a mill with the object of using it for trading purposes. However it turned out that the mill was in a much worse state than they had imagined and the best thing the taxpayer could do was to strip all the items out of it and sell them piecemeal. He made a considerable
