"Responding to the linguistic and cultural diversity of the U.S. K-12 student population and an increasing emphasis on STEM, this book offers a model for professional development that engages teachers in transformative action research projects and explicitly links literacy to mathematics and science curriculum through sociocultural principles. Providing detailed and meaningful demonstrations of participatory action research in the classroom, Razfar and Troiano present an effective, systemic approach that helps preservice teachers support students' funds of knowledge. By featuring teacher and researcher narratives, this book centers teacher expertise and offers a more holistic and humanistic understanding of authentic and empathetic teaching. Focusing on integrating instructional knowledge from ESL, bilingual, and STEM education, the range of cases and examples will allow readers to implement action research projects in their own classrooms. Chapters include discussion questions and additional resources for students, researchers, and educators"-- icons Week One gets users started with Visual

C++. After installing and moving around the components of the software, users will examine a preliminary program to get the feel for C++ and Visual C++ specifically. Users will learn about: C++ basics; hierarchies; members,

functions, and objects;

inheritance; MFC;

installing Visual C++, the Visual C++ compiler. In

Week Two, users will look at components of

Windows applications, and how they are invoked with

Visual C++. Topics

include: keyboard input;

using the mouse; handling data files; lists and serialization; toolbars and status bars; graphics; and projects. Week Three looks at some more involved aspects of Visual

C++ and Windows

applications. Topics include: multimedia and video links; C++ classes;

DLLs; ActiveX; OCX; debugging and program optimization; code profiling and assessment; common programming problems and their solutions.
